Or better yet, try to reduce the detail in your budgets to streamline the entire process. Budgeting should be a dynamic process within strategic planning. The more your budgets can react to change, the closer budgeting will be to a value-added activity. If your budgets don't add value to decision making, then it's time to improve the process.

How to Improve the Budgeting Process

Understanding what drives your success and budgeting for those things makes your budget more actionable. Identify drivers of financial performance. Financial performance is an outcome. It is the results of what was done in the past and as such, is not something that employees can act upon.
